Mission

Baptist Health Foundation, Inc., supports the health system’s mission through philanthropy and stewardship of gifts that enable Baptist Health hospitals — Baptist Medical Center Jacksonville, Baptist Beaches, Baptist Nassau, Baptist South and Wolfson Children’s Hospital — to continually serve patients and their families and other community healthcare needs.
Today, I am pleased to introduce this first edition of Baptist Health Foundation’s Legacy Report. This annual publication is our way of illustrating the power of endowments. Within these pages, we will share stories highlighting the impact these funds have on the way we deliver health care to those who live in our community and beyond.

Baptist Health is entering into a new era in health care, with a strong focus on building its endowments. As the only locally owned, locally governed health system in our region, these funds are vital to the future of our institution because of the stability they provide. The proceeds from these endowments allow us the opportunity to augment operating income in strategic areas and provide a long-term strategy so we are able to sustain key programs. And in the current healthcare environment we are living in, sustainability is more important than ever. Through sound investment models, endowments deliver lasting financial resources that enable us to move forward and plan for the decades ahead.

I believe the stories that follow will inspire and move you, as they do us. The generosity and philanthropic support we receive help us carry out our mission and deliver on our brand promise, Changing Health Care for Good.

Once again, we thank you for your friendship and continued support.

Sincerely,

A. Hugh Greene

Baptist Health
I am thrilled to be chair of the Baptist Health Foundation Board of Trustees during such an exciting time of change and evolution. The new brand promise, Changing Health Care for Good, and a focus on building the endowment with support from the new Matching Gift Program ensure this will be an interesting year for Baptist Health.

We created the Legacy Report to celebrate the existing endowments and show the impact they have on Baptist Health and the communities it serves. In selecting a theme for this report, no other word captured the essence quite like “legacy,” which is defined as something that exists today as a result of something that happened in the past.

Baptist Health is committed to providing comprehensive healthcare services, regardless of financial viability. As part of its mission, Baptist Health has implemented various social responsibility programs to help those who are underserved and help those who are sometimes unable to help themselves. And while Baptist Health is a valuable asset to our community, it also relies on philanthropic gifts to be able to provide quality, cutting-edge health care. Gifts from donors, like those we describe within these pages, make it possible for Baptist Health to do such good for our neighbors across the region.

I consider it a privilege to be a part of this community that assures Baptist Health can continue its great work.

Sincerely,

Dennis L. Blackburn, Esq.
Chair, Baptist Health Foundation Board of Trustees
My first months as vice president & chief development officer for Baptist Health Foundation have been both exciting and rewarding. I am happy to be a part of Baptist Health and to join in the effort of Changing Health Care for Good. Endowments are vital to this endeavor, so we are pleased to share our inaugural edition of the Legacy Report with you.

In this annual publication, we will provide summaries of each of our 68 endowments and describe their purpose. We will also share stories that demonstrate the power of these funds and the benefits they bring to our patients and the communities we serve. The three stories in this inaugural issue include the largest endowment ever received (Weaver Legacy Endowment), the first major endowment (Wolfson Family Endowment) and finally, a series of endowments that reinforce our faith-based mission (Pastoral Care). The $1.75 million available for distribution this year will help those whose lives have been interrupted by illness and injury by promoting health and wellness.

This is a pivotal time for Baptist Health as we look to build the endowment through a strategic Matching Gift Program described on page 19.

Your support is fundamental to our success. On behalf of our patients and the communities we serve, please accept our sincere gratitude for your continued investment in Baptist Health.

Sincerely,

Pierre N. Allaire, PhD

Addressing the Need

The Weaver Legacy Endowment is Changing the Future of Behavioral Health

When Wayne and Delores Barr Weaver chose to make their groundbreaking gift toward improving behavioral health treatment for children and young adults, the door to better understanding, acceptance and the ability to treat behavioral health conditions was opened. The goal of their $10 million endowment gift, the largest gift in Baptist Health’s history, is to provide access to treatment, facilitate conversation and create a greater awareness of behavioral health conditions for children and adolescents in Northeast Florida. Their gift will have significant returns, leaving behind a legacy for patients and their loved ones far into the future.

Michael De La Hunt, MD, medical director of Pediatric Mental Health Services at Wolfson Children’s Hospital and chief of psychology and psychiatry at Nemours Children’s Clinic, Jacksonville, put it best when he said, “Pediatric mental health needs to be addressed openly, without shame and stigmatization. The Weavers’ gift will bring the topic into focus for conversation and concern.” He is confident that the gift will support the ongoing development of clinical services, education, research and advocacy opportunities.

A number of recent tragic events which were tied to mental health conditions have occurred throughout the nation, illuminating the need for better identification and treatment. “Mental conditions go undiagnosed and untreated for a variety of reasons including limited access to care, lack of acknowledgment and even fear of being judged,” explains Ellen Williams, PhD, administrator of Behavioral Health for Baptist Health. But there is hope that these events may be preempted and prejudices can be overcome. With a focus on education and advocacy, problems can be addressed sooner, creating better results for those living with such conditions.

The key is prevention. “Known biological predispositions and social factors combine to create an unstable mental environment for people and they are the ones we need to reach out to and help develop a safety net for,” says Dr. Williams. Collaborating with primary care physicians and pediatricians can help us identify early signs of anxiety and depression. With early diagnosis and treatment, behavioral health conditions can be better managed, affording patients and their families stability and structure.

In Jacksonville’s urban core, where the need is greatest and access is lowest, children and adolescents are having a hard time with one of the most basic essentials — transportation. With a limited number of clinics in the urban core, it’s difficult for the children to get to appointments across town. To alleviate this problem, Baptist Health and other non-profit groups in the area are working to provide school-based services to their patients. The benefit to the child is less time away from the classroom and limited disruption of their daily routine. In addition, the providers value the ability to work with patients in their day-to-day environment, gaining better insight into their everyday lives.

An additional issue arises due to the small number of providers in our community. Patients who are in need of medications and treatment are having difficulty getting an appointment. Dr. De La Hunt advocates the need for advanced mental health practitioners to help respond to patients in a more timely manner.

“There is a new emphasis on a collaborative team effort and empowering the patient to take charge of his or her own care. Advanced practitioners are able to complement physicians, increasing provider availability, decreasing scheduling delays for specialized care, and improving provider-patient educational opportunities,” Dr. De La Hunt said.

Perhaps the biggest challenge for behavioral health providers is in changing the conversation. Limited awareness and preconceived notions are difficult to overcome, but work is underway to get the word out. Community events, public service announcements and media attention will help give the topic the attention it deserves.

“Pediatric mental health needs to be addressed openly, without shame and stigmatization.”

Michael De La Hunt, MD

The Weavers are excited to see the changes that will come about because of their support. “It is our hope that all of the children in our community lead happy, healthy lives and have access to the health care they require,” Mrs. Weaver says. “We know all too well how isolating behavioral health conditions can be, and hope this gift will initiate an understanding and lead to better outcomes.”
The Wolfson Family – A Legacy of Generosity

The Wolfson Family Endowment Provides for Pediatric Healthcare Needs in Our Community

“All of this I request, so that one day the Children’s Clinic that I have dreamed of may be a reality and that the healthy, happy children who leave this Clinic, after having received its help and blessings, may forever feel a sense of gratitude to the staff for their courage, patience and untiring efforts in charting their courses, and to the founders of the Clinic for their wisdom in showing the way to the leaders of the future whose power of leadership will be measured only by their greatness of purpose, broadness of vision, and most of all — health of mind and body.”

Morris Wolfson’s 1946 letter to his sons

The Wolfson name goes back much further than the time it has been synonymous with children’s health care in Jacksonville. In 1896, with only the clothes on his back, Morris Wolfson completed his pilgrimage from Lithuania to the United States. Working to make a life for his family, he made his way to Jacksonville in 1912. Through years of struggle and hard work, he built a business, a name for himself, a strong reputation and a love for people.

One of the most challenging events in his life was the loss of his 1-year-old son, Percy, from pneumonia in 1923. At that time, there was no place in the community dedicated to providing health care for all children, regardless of their race, religion or socioeconomic status. Years later in a letter to his five sons, he expressed his vision of providing the funds to construct a children’s clinic in Jacksonville.

In 1951, three years after he passed, the Wolfson Family Foundation was established to help bring Morris Wolfson’s vision to fruition. That year, an initial $250,000 gift went toward the construction of Wolfson Memorial Children’s Hospital, a 50-bed wing at Baptist Memorial Hospital. An additional $250,000 gift in 1955 increased the size of the hospital another two floors. Over the next three decades, additional gifts led to the construction of Wolfson Children’s Hospital, the Florence Monsky Wolfson Medical Center Tower, the first three floors of the Pavilion, which houses the Louis E. Wolfson Center for Mothers and Infants, and the Wolfson Wellness Center.

“It was really the loss of a child that started the movement to bring this hospital to our community. It is amazing to see how much impact Percy’s short life has had,” explains Don Wolfson, Wolfson Family Foundation chairman.
The crowning achievement of Morris Wolfson’s vision was the 1993 construction of Wolfson Children’s Hospital. “Without a doubt, I know my father would be proud of Wolfson Children’s Hospital and all the services and programs it provides to the children of this community. He would be delighted to see the progress that has been made since he drafted his letter so many years ago,” says Nathan Wolfson, Morris’s youngest son.

Addressing the need for pediatric health care in the region, the hospital treats all children, regardless of their race, religion or ability to pay. Physicians and staff even bring children from other countries to provide lifesaving surgeries they would otherwise be unable to receive.

“Our family is very proud that from day one, it was clear that the hospital doors would be open to all children. For that time, the thinking was very progressive and it is fulfilling to see that the hospital continues to care for all children, regardless of any social, racial or religious affiliation,” explains Michael Wolfson, Baptist Health Foundation Board member.

In 1999, the Wolfson Family Endowment was established to support the needs of Wolfson Children’s Hospital. This fund provides for the hospital and will continue to do so in perpetuity. It has been used to purchase various types of medical equipment, upgrade interior spaces and provide necessary supplies. Most recently, it supported the opening of four specialty clinics, creating a regional network of children’s health care and addressing a community need once again.

For the many children and families coming to Wolfson Children’s Hospital from outside of Jacksonville, hours of travel for treatment and appointments take a toll on school attendance, family time and work schedules. The Wolfson Children’s Specialty Centers make care more convenient and accessible to those patients. Located in Clay County, Lake City, Daytona Beach and Brunswick, Ga., the centers feature a variety of outpatient and specialty services. Michael Wolfson said, “This regional expansion is an outgrowth of my grandfather’s vision and is paramount to fulfilling the healthcare need of children in areas with little access.”

And if 62 years of support is not enough to establish the kind of legacy Morris Wolfson had hoped for, the hundreds of volunteer hours surely must. The Wolfson family is completely engrained in the hospital, serving on boards, leadership groups and planning committees. Don explains, “Our goal as a foundation is to stay engaged and perpetuate our involvement with the hospital from generation to generation.”

The Wolfson Family Endowment is a gift that keeps giving by helping to create a healthier future for the children of our region. In the words of Nathan Wolfson, “It is my hope that the gift helps to maintain the hospital and continues launching it higher into the upper echelons of health care for our children for many years to come.”
The Spirit of Divine Giving

Pastoral Care Endowment Funds Contribute to Holistic Care at Baptist Health and Beyond

It only seems natural that Pastoral Care would play such an important role at a faith-based organization, but the department’s approach to care is perhaps more far-reaching than most people realize — thanks in large part to gifts from many donors throughout the years.

“Our staff has people from many different faiths and our purpose is to practice love and compassion towards our patients and their families.”

Larry Wagoner, PhD

Larry Wagoner, PhD, director of Pastoral Care, has been with Baptist Health for 33 years and, even today, the power of compassion and prayer continues to surprise him. “It’s amazing what we can achieve simply by listening to people,” Dr. Wagoner says. “It helps people accept major life changes. It’s also inspired many to help our program grow.”

In addition to staffing the hospitals with chaplains, the program prepares people for certified chaplaincy and pastoral counseling, and prepares clergy so they can offer better support for patients. The Clinical Pastoral Education Program, an interfaith professional ministry program, gives students hands-on experience and a deeper understanding of the role pastoral care plays in health care. The program welcomes students from all faiths and welcomes participants from all over the world. “We are proud of our program’s diversity. Not only are our students learning from us, we learn from them, too, which helps us to be able to work with patients from all walks of life,” explains Dr. Wagoner.

Pastoral Care endowments have come about for a variety of reasons. Some are made in honor of those with a direct tie to the program. Others are created to enhance the services the chaplains are able to provide. Whatever the reason, the reputation of Baptist Health’s Pastoral Care Program is demonstrated by the sampling of donors and the number of supporting funds that have been established. There is, however, a common thread that runs through each of the endowments — the understood importance of spirituality in healing.

Although pastoral care often goes unrecognized in treatment plans, for those who have experienced its healing power first-hand, it’s an essential part of patient care.
The Sheldon B. Boney Endowment was established in memory of Mrs. Boney, who went through the Clinical Pastoral Education Program herself, becoming the first official chaplaincy staff member for the pediatric department. “Her compassion and support were just what patients needed. She was the symbol of what we’re all about,” recalls Dr. Wagoner.

Considered a cornerstone in Baptist Medical Center Jacksonville history, Dr. Edgar Cooper, a minister, was a longstanding member of the Baptist Medical Center Board. He and his wife established the Melvyn and Edgar Cooper Endowment to ensure that holistic, compassionate pastoral care was always available. Mrs. Cooper said, “We realized how important spiritual healing was and wanted to make sure it was accessible to patients and their families.”

Others believe in the program so strongly that they work to develop it in their own community. When Jim Mayo retired as president of Baptist Medical Center Nassau in 2011, the hospital wanted to honor his service by creating an endowment in his name. He asked that the gift, the Jim Mayo Chaplaincy Endowment, be directed to the support and expansion of the Pastoral Care Program at the Nassau hospital. “Mr. Mayo served as a chaplain himself and saw the value of pastoral care in the healing process,” said Rev. Jim Tippins, senior chaplain at Baptist Nassau.

A pharmacist by trade, Marian Derfer wanted to enhance the care available at Baptist Medical Center Beaches. She made her first gift in 2008 to support nursing scholarships and established the Baptist Beaches Pastoral Care Endowment in 2012. Rev. Don Lynn, senior chaplain at Baptist Beaches, says, “Mrs. Derfer’s gift ensures the chaplaincy staff has the resources we need to continue our education, maintain certifications and gain access to up-to-date information so we can provide patients and their families with care that is as progressive as the medical care they receive while at our hospital.”

Each of the five Baptist Health hospitals welcomes patients from all religions, so pastoral care, like medical care, is not one-size-fits-all. The Lamb Family Endowment was established to support the Clinical Pastoral Education Program and provides the staff of all Baptist Medical Center campuses with the means to continue their training, promoting diversity in religious faiths. Bronson Lamb, Ill, said, “It’s impressive to see that the staff comes from different backgrounds and helps all kinds of patients and ailments, from the critically ill to those who are in for a minor surgery.” Just this year, the Alexandre J. Allaire Pastoral Care Endowment was established to help support the ministry of Baptist Medical Center Jacksonville.

“Our son’s strong faith led us to name this endowment in his honor. What better way to help others feel peace and comfort in their times of illness or distress,” explains Alexandre’s parents, Pierre and Lorraine.

Each of the gifts has made an impact across our spectrum of health care and reaches beyond the Baptist and Wolfson Children’s Hospital walls. Whether program graduates work within a hospital, in home health or hospice care, or even serve outside the country, the variety of ways the program supports patients and their families ensures the legacy these gifts have created lives on, maintaining the foundation upon which Baptist Health was built.

Peter S. Stevens, MD – This gift was established in 1998 by the late Dr. Stevens, a pediatric urologist, and his wife, Barbara. The fund is used to support education and research in pediatric urology to benefit the patients of Wolfson Children’s Hospital and Nemours Children’s Clinic. Dr. Stevens was a trustee of Baptist Health Foundation for several years and understood the critical role of philanthropy in health care.

Jack Surasky – In 2000, this gift was established by Mr. Surasky’s estate to support the medical needs of critically ill children and educational needs of the staff who serve them in the Northeast Florida Pediatric Diabetes Center at Wolfson Children’s Hospital.

Vickers Family – Established in 1998 by the Samuel Vickers family, this gift supports treatment, research and education for children living with asthma, one of the leading diagnoses in the Wolfson Children’s Hospital Emergency Center. Funds are also used to provide equipment and necessary drugs to treat asthma for children whose families are experiencing financial hardship.

Weaver Legacy – In 2012, this fund was established by J. Wayne and Delores Barr Weaver to support behavioral health programs at Wolfson Children’s Hospital and Baptist Health for both children and young adults. Their goal for the gift, the largest in the health system’s history, is to do more than treat those with behavioral health conditions, but to also help patients who are receiving treatment, while making the community aware of the need for behavioral health programs.

Judson and Carolyn Whorton Cancer Research – In honor of Dr. Neil Abramson, the Whortons established this gift in 2000 to provide funding for cancer research and treatment at Baptist Cancer Institute. The funds also support the use of clinical trials at the Institute, which help to advance the future of cancer care, and the purchase of new, cutting-edge technology.

Wolfson Children’s Hospital Bass Tournament – Established in 1999 by employees of Baptist Health and funded by proceeds from the annual Bass Tournament which began in 1989, this gift provides for the educational needs of patients and staff and supports equipment purchases for Wolfson Children’s Hospital. Tournament leadership is composed of members of the Plant Facilities Department at Baptist Health and volunteers.

Wolfson Children’s Hospital General – In 1996, this gift was established to support the areas of greatest need at Wolfson Children’s Hospital. This all-purpose endowment provides flexible funding for timely and critical needs.

Wolfson Children’s Hospital President’s Discretionary – This gift was established in 2013 by Dr. and Mrs. Gary Soud to support the needs of Wolfson Children’s Hospital.

Wolfson Family – Established in 1999, this gift was established to serve the needs of Wolfson Children’s Hospital patients. The Wolfson family has been integral to the enhancement of pediatric care in the region, affecting the lives of thousands of children.

Saul and Hazel Wolfson Endowment for Pediatric Research – This gift was established by Karen and Don Wolfson in 1999 to honor his parents. The purpose of the gift is to fund pediatric research within Wolfson Children’s Hospital that will help promote advances in the treatment of children in our community.

Albert Wilkinson, Jr., MD, Endowed Professorship of Pediatric Surgery – Established in 2013 in memory of Dr. Wilkinson, Jr., this gift allows Wolfson Children’s Hospital to support a percentage of a pediatric general surgeon’s salary and provide the surgeon with the necessary non-clinical time to enhance surgical services provided at the hospital.

Gifts can be made to any endowment at any level and at any time.
